

PRESS RELEASE
For immediate release

SAAQ authorizes Passenger Car Driver's License for T-REX

Montreal, February 9, 2009 – Campagna Motors is delighted to announce that the provincial motor vehicle bureau (Société de l'assurance automobile du Québec or SAAQ) has implemented a policy that allows Class 5 (passenger vehicle) license holders to drive the three-wheeled T-REX. This new regulation will make the T-REX available to a greater number of people, now that the SAAQ has realized that operating a T-REX is more comparable to driving a passenger vehicle than a motorcycle. However, under the Quebec Highway Safety Code, owners have to register the T-REX as a motorcycle and the driver and passenger must wear a helmet, just as they would for a motorcycle. But the motorcycle license requirement no longer applies.

David Neault, Chief Operating Officer (COO), is thrilled with the news. "We've been facing many unreasonable hurdles for quite some time now, some of which have deterred customers from buying our products," he explained. "A good number of T-REX fans were put off by the long, drawn-out process of obtaining a motorcycle license, while others objected to the idea of having to learn to ride a motorcycle to pass the road test. We trust that the SAAQ's initiative will pave the way for other provinces to modify their laws so that we can offer this exciting vehicle to a greater number of sports car enthusiasts!" Neault believes regulatory bodies ought to work in partnership with cutting-edge manufacturers in developing regulations for consumer-ready innovative products.

He added: "This new policy is a great market development opportunity for us and we hope that other provincial jurisdictions will follow Quebec's lead. We actually find it paradoxical that a vehicle such as the T-REX is approved by Transport Canada yet it cannot be registered in provinces such as Ontario and Alberta. The SAAQ's position clearly indicates that it considers T-REX to be more like a sports car than a motorcycle."

For more information on the T-REX and Campagna Motors' other three-wheeled vehicle, the V13R, visit the Montreal Motorcycle Show at the Montreal Convention Centre, February 20-22, 2009, or go to www.campagnamotors.com.

-30-

Source:
Claude Rousseau
Tel.: +1 514 270-7651
E-mail: pr@campagnamotors.com

About Campagna Motors

Campagna Motors, established in Canada, develops, manufactures and assembles three-wheel performance vehicles. Its mission is to offer the thrill and experience of an exotic sport car (Ferrari, Porsche, Lamborghini, Lotus) for the price of a mass market vehicle. On top of the T-REX, powered by a Kawasaki 1400 cc Inline 4 cylinder engine, Campagna Motors also manufactures a 3-wheel roadster vehicle, the V13R reverse-trike which is powered by the Harley-Davidson® Liquid-cooled, Revolution® 60° V-Twin engine. For more information, please visit us online at www.campagnamotors.com